To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

[34 Eccles St., Dublin] T. Davis of Providence sent the writer T. Parker's Discourses. The writer is a Unitarian but finds among the adherents of this church "as much coldness toward human improvement" as among those of other sects. "Tee-totalism is my favorite hobby." Discusses the question of British trade with Brazil. The writer considers all slave-grown produce as stolen goods. Free trade with Brazil would cause increased exploitation of Africans. "Can there be a doubt that your increase of slavery is owing to our great trade with you?" The writer has appealed to the London Committee "to cry out against all slave produce." Contrasts the addressee's Non-Resistance [illegible] his own attitude toward government action. James H. W[illegible], brother of R. D. Webb, professes to be "more of an absolute Non-resistant than any of us." The Irish people are now almost wholly absorbed in their political troubles. As Daniel O'Connell has a horror of bloodshed, "while he lives, I believe we shall be safe from the calamity of civil war." Irish agitation is a security for the peace of Europe, as England, if invaded, would get no help from Ireland. The teetotal reform "is producing glorious results in this land." Educational conditions are also improving somewhat. The writer is glad that the addressee liked his essay in the Liberty Bell.

«35 Eccles St., Dublin» The writer has no objection to the addressee's publishing of parts of a former letter. D. O'Connell and his companions have been set free, to the frenzied joy of the people. The writer did not attend the public dinner, which was disgraced by much drinking. Comments on the Temperance movement. Contrasts American and Irish teetotalism. Father Matthews's influence is still great. However, he has spent his own and other property on the cause, so that an appeal in his behalf is necessary. The writer tells of his own conversion to teetotalism. His wife died over fifteen years ago, leaving him wit[illegible]ur daughters and a son. Jan,

«New York» The writer acknowledges receipt of another copy of the Liberty Bell. She is unhappy in New York and would rather be actively engaged in Anti-Slavery work. Reports I.Hopper's health as improving. Mr. Smith's illness was caused by his attempt "to save the life of another man who was on fire from the same lamp." Comments on the odd appearance and kindly nature of Orson S. Murray. W. H. Channing reminds the writer of Garrison. Referring to Channing as the antagonist of John A. Collins at the Reform Conventions in Boston, the writer begs for information about Channing's conduct there. A New York lady received letters [illegible] which he was accused of being "angry as a madman."
